HIRAM SMITH'S
Ophthalmic Panacea!
IS WITHOUT DOUBT THE MOST WONDERFUL Eye Healer that has yet been discovered.
It CURES the most stubborn and hopeless cases of CHRONIC INFLAMMATIONS, GRANULATED LIDS, FILMS, &c., as has been sufficiently demonstrated during the few months in which it has been brought into public notice. The proprietor is so fully convinced of its INFALIBILITY that he WARRANTS A CURE OR REFUNDS THE MONEY. It can do the eye no harm, and a trial of it is therefore without injury or expense to the patient if a cure is not effected.
It has cured cases of FIVE, SIX, NINE, FIFTEEN, and even EIGHTEEN YEARS' standing in Harrisburg, Linn county, Oregon, and its vicinity, to which the following persons will bear witness:

E. B. MOORE,	NATHANIEL BELL,
A. L. WALLACE,	G. R. WARD,
Mrs. MONTGOMERY,	JOHN M. HOLLOWAY,
W. D. PORTER,	ROBT. RAMSEY,

And others in that vicinity.
Persons afflicted with the distressing scourge of diseased eyes are advised to give this remedy a fair trial on the NO CURE, NO PAY and NO INJURY plan.

DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

DATES TO MARCH 10.

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—In the Senate, the House joint resolution for the appointment of a retrenchment committee was tabled.

The Vice President presented the House bill for the repeal of the tenure of office act. On motion of Thayer it was tabled till the expiration of the morning hour.

Sumner presented a petition from the Republican State Council of Virginia, stating that the Commanding General does not pay proper attention to the application of colored men for office, and asking that they may have a due share in the State offices. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Bayard introduced a bill for the relief of the daughter of General C. F. Smith, deceased. Referred.

Morton offered a resolution to amend the twenty fifth rule of the Senate, so as to allow the introduction of a bill on a day's notice. Referred to the Committee on Revision of Rules.

Edmunds offered a resolution directing the Secretary of War to communicate information relative to the military importance of San Juan Island. Adopted.

Thayer called up the bill to repeal the Tenure of Office act.

Trumbull favored early action, but said there was a similar bill, with amendments, pending in the Judiciary Committee. He moved the reference of this bill.

Thayer opposed reference.

Edmunds thought the Senate should not hastily divest itself of one of its greatest constitutional powers.

Williams took the same view. The bill had passed the House under the previous question and had probably not received the proper consideration.

Several other Senators expressed their views on the subject and the bill was finally referred—34 to 25.

Sherman offered a resolution for a joint committee, with leave to sit during the recess and examine and report upon the expediency of reorganizing the civil service. Laid over.

Corbett introduced a bill to establish additional National banks, secured by United States bonds, and to secure the redemption of their circulation in coin. Referred to the Committee on Finance.

McDonald introduced a bill guaranteeing the pay of interest on bonds for the Memphis and St. Louis and St. Louis and Iron Mountain railroads, to the amount of $25,000 per mile, to aid the construction of those railroads whose bonds form a continuous line along the Mississippi river to Helena, Arkansas.

Wilson introduced a bill for the appointment of Commissioners, to examine the claims of loyal Southerners for supplies furnished the armies.

Abbott introduced a bill for the examination of general claims of loyal citizens of the Southern States.

New York News.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Horace Lackin, Superintendent of the Vermont Central Railroad, died last night.

The Union Pacific Railroad has not yet declared any Board of Directors elected.

Western Union Telegraph .37@.38.

The ship James Foster, from Liverpool, has arrived in the lower bay. She lost four of her passengers and twelve of her crew. Nineteen of the remaining passengers are sick of fever, and have been sent to Ward's Island hospital.

A. T. Stewart has begun the erection of an immense hotel, with a front of 200 feet on Fourth Avenue, extending between Thirty second and Thirty-third streets. The property will be managed in the interest of the working women, and board be furnished as cheaply as possible. The accommodations are to be excellent. The hotel will cost over $2,000,000.

The election of the Union Pacific Railroad Directors was stopped by an injunction issued by Judge Barnard, at the instance of James Fisk, Jr. The votes were cast before the injunction was served, which service will therefore preclude their being opened and counted. The old board holds over and is nearly the same as the new.

The officers of the army and navy of the Department of the Gulf met this evening and organized.

H. M. Steel, nephew of the late Barton Key, committed suicide to day.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 10.—Ignatiff, the Russian Minister, has returned to St Petersburg on leave of absence.

There is a story, perhaps forgotten by all but men who were students at a certain college nearly thirty years ago, of an enthusiastic professor of entomology, not celebrated for his exercise of hospitality, who was so delighted at the arrival of an eminent pursuer of insects that he invited him to board and bed in his chambers. Next morning Dr Macfly greeted his guest, "And how did ye sleep the nicht, Mester Beechemoth?"

"Not very well, strange bed, perhaps was the reason. But—"

"Ah," quoth the doctor, eagerly, "ye were just bitten by something, eh?"

"Well, to tell the truth, doctor, I was bitten by something."

"Just think o' that! Bitten, wur ye? Now, can you say it was anything noteworthy that bit you? Peculiar, eh?"

"Fleas, I think. But such devils for biting I never met in my life."

"I should think so, indeed" (with great glee). "They're Sicilian fleas that I imported myself."

Old Loves.

From A. the Year Round.

The Frenchman who said that we always return to our first loves was one of the true things of human nature as every mature mind knows its truth. We do return to our old loves and no after affection ever destroys their place in our hearts.

There are abundant reasons for this going back upon life at least in thought and desire, if not in actual renewal. In love with what our sensations were all new, and when the mere act of living was to stand a joy, everything was painted in with rose color, everything was perfect, and each emotion in its novelty was a veritable revelation of the divine. We had not then become blunted by satiety, chilled by corrected experience. We firmly believe that what we felt no one else had ever felt before or would ever feel again with anything like our intensity; we firmly believed that all other people's emotions were tame and colorless beside our own. For youth in itself is a perpetual recreation of the primeval Adam, and each man lives for a time in a paradise of his own making, which no brother has ever shared. We and our special Eve dwell in it alone, for just so long a time as the terror and inexperience of our first passion last. The pity is that it lasts so short a time, and that we wake, while yet so young, to the consciousness that all this exquisite delight is only delusion, and that "mind sees what it brings" in love as well as in other things.

The love of a boy or girl is unique. It is never repeated in kind, though it may be even surpassed in degree, for the love of the mature heart is more powerful than that of the youthful; but the freshness, the ecstatic sense of certainty, the sublime belief in itself and its immortality, in its unchangeableness and future characteristic of the first young love, have no echo even in strength and fidelity of the mature. Besides, it is so divinely blind, and its blindness remains though the eyes may be couched to see everything else. Though our early charmer was snub-nosed and red headed, and fully half a dozen years our elder yet our memory plays magic tricks with reality, and we think of her to this day, as we believed her at the time; beautiful, golden haired, and sixteen. If we have never seen her since that fatal hour when we tore ourselves from her side in an agony of despair at the cruel fate which sent us to New Zealand or the West Indies, no shock of personal experience has shattered the sweet idea school of our boyish dreams, and she will always be to us what she was: but if we have seen her after our eyes have been couched, we stand aghast as at the discovery of some Meruline in her serpent state. That plain-featured, commonplace dowdy is no more the peerless Dulcinea of only ten years ago, than she is her own grandmother. Henceforth she is two persons, the one living in memory: the other in actuality, and of the two the remembrance is the more real.

No one makes any allowance for the action of time in another, or expects to find any striking change, how long soever the interval between the last parting and the present meeting. An increasing waistcoat and a decreasing chevelure to ourselves, tell us beyond all question of an airy youth forever fled, and a middle aged respectability settled down heavily in its stead: yet we look to find our boyish ideal exactly where we left her, and heave no end of deprecatory sighs when we see the thickened jowl, the broadened waist, the puffy foot, the meagre wisp of grayish hair, sole remnant of those glorious tresses which might have been Godiva's. "Who would have thought it?" we say compassionately, forgetting the lesson set us daily by our own looking-glass. And then we turn our faces backward, and know that the Godiva of our early love is dead, buried ten fathoms deep by the almighty hand of time, and that she has left only her memory to keep us company. But her memory is immortal, and over this time has no kind of power.

Yet there are old loves for whom, when we have got over the first shock of disappointment at finding that forty is not as twenty was, we knit up the raveled edges of time, and carry the past into the present—if in paler colors and a less florid pattern, yet with a joined thread that makes the two of one piece. Our love remains the same in essentials, with a difference in forms. A tender mellowness of affection has taken the place of the old fervid, fiery passion which once consumed as much as it warmed, and we seem to have carried on into the present the whole accumulated strength of the past. Certain phrases, looks and tones, remind us so vividly of by-gone days that at last we lose all sharpness of perception, and can scarcely distinguish between them and now, till the past becomes the present, blended and inseparable, and the mind cannot recognize any break. We all know instances of the first love married after the severance perhaps of a quarter of a century, with two flourishing families in the meantime—instances where maturity has taken up the parable of youth, and life has doubled back upon itself, and ended at its starting place. Such reunions are not necessarily either happy or unsuccessful. It all depends on the amount of mental sympathy possible between the pair, after the warping of their diverse experience, whether the memory of their youthful fancy can be consolidated into a living love or no. If the love has been very true and earnest, and if it has never failed, though it may have been overlaid and even forgotten, the chances are that the marriage will be happy; but say it has been only a fancy, without solid foundation in the inner chambers of the heart, and then the chances are the other way, and the look out is dubious. But even then, and at the worst, the luckless experimentors have the memory of the time when they thought they loved. At the worst they can lay the blame on time and distance, and think, "Ah, well if they had been married early in life, when they wished it, they would have fitted better than they do now, they would have each been more plastic, and by this time would have been welded together as well as wedded." But an adverse fate came in between, and hardened angles are the result.

There is something inexpressibly soothing to our failing vanity, in being with those who have known us at our best. "Ah! you should have known him twenty years ago," is a salve to many a man's mortification when a young and irreverent generation passes him by as an old fogy, not worth a thought—he once charmed his club and commanded a following as large as a moderate sized constituency. And if this be true of men, it is still more so of women, who depend for social repute and influence more on their personal charms—which time ruthlessly handles—than on their intellectual acquirements, which are of tougher material, and not so soon frayed and torn. In fact, one of the best things about early marriages hangs on this point. The gradual carrying on into old age of the beauty and sweetness of youth gives a kind of youth even to old age. A new husband would be ashamed to take about that dear ugly old woman, and present her to the world as my wife—the choice I have made from the hundreds of beautiful young creatures ready to my hand. But to her lawful proprietor she is as much her former self as her present, for the change has come so gently that he has not noticed how it came, and has never been shocked by it, as he would have been shocked by a sudden revelation. He loves her, both for what she was and what she is, and remembers how she lost this beauty which had once been so characteristic of her, and how that infirmity came upon her when the child died and she nearly broke her heart for grief—when he himself was ill, and when she nursed him and lost her complexion, and got a skin disease in consequence, which but for the skill and persistency of physicians can even come. And remembering all this he feels that there is an honor greater than mere skin deep beauty even on her wrinkles and her loss of hair, her self-sacrifice and her spoiled complexion.

Our feeling for places known and loved in early life is the old home affair not to be set at rest by forty years of returning. Such places come back to us under dreams more frequently than persons return. We remember pine woods and the brake, we see the sea and the heather-clad hills, we are standing under the white cliff watching the sea come foaming and tumbling in as we used when we were children, or we are out in the gray of the morning, with that old dog at our heels and we put up the little brown birds and the startled wood pigeons as we used to put them up long ago. The burning glories of the American forests, the luxurious loveliness of the South, the romance of the East, the fervid life of the tropics, are as nothing to us compared to one day of the "hard gray weather" of our youth, one hour of the sport and vigor of old times. Alas we want to be young again, that is what our dreams mean, for, without youth, our return to those old loves is not practically satisfactory. How often, when we do actually go back home after a life spent elsewhere, our dreams vanish! We cannot climb familiar crags as we used, we cannot stand the fatigue of a long day's partridge shooting through the stubble, or of grouse shooting on the moors, the cars are heavy and not so easily feathered as of old, our gun and rod are not so manageable as they were; the young enthusiasm which cared no more for a ducking than it cared for a midge-bite, is washed away in the fear of the rheumatic pains sure to follow damp. Alas, for the frailty of the flesh in the presence of so much stoutness of soul! Sometimes, indeed, we are able to work the new vein opened up on old ground, and to accept the former love in its altered relations with ourselves. We then content ourselves like my Uncle Toby, with mimic repetitions of what we can never perform in their former fullness again, or we satisfy ourselves with watching what we cannot share. If we cannot climb those purple crags, our young ones can, while we wait down below, watching the sunshine and the shadow hurrying over them, and bringing out or covering down every jut and cranny, every patch of purple heather, or golden gorse, or tuft of waving fern, with the rapidity of a transformation scene. The love of nature increases with time and grows by knowledge; the longer we stand by this great desk, the more we get to love the lessons learned on it, and to appreciate the value of the work it enables us to perform.

Old books, too, are old friends, to which we return with faithful loyalty. It is doubtful if any one who reads "Gil Blas," "Don Quixote," or the "Thousand and One Nights," for the first time in mature life, ever has the same exquisite enjoyment of them as those who have read them while young for the story, and when old for the art or the philosophy. Delightful they must always be to every one with brains, but they have lost that delicious aroma, that magic coloring which the imagination of youth supplies out of its own richness.

On revient toujours à ses premiers amours in religion, too, as well as in other things—if not always, still often enough to furnish an example. The convert who has lived contentedly enough in his new faith, not unfrequently turns back to his old upon his death bed, and dies in the creed in which he was born—but had not lived. All of which gives us occasion to speculate whether the mind be really independent, or only seemingly so, and whether first impressions are not of more importance than all the self education acquired.

The Welcome.

Naither bairn cam' hame—
Hame to mither and me—
It was yestreen in the gloamin',
When scarce was light to see
The wee bit face o' the darlin',
That its greetin' cry was heard,
And our crowded nestle made a place
To hold naither bird.

Six little boonie months,
Ah me, take muckle to fill,
But to grudge the bit t' the seventh,
For mither and I were ill!
Oh! nestle up closer dearie,
Lie saft on the snowy breast,
Where fat life's fountain flow'th,
When thy twa warm lips are prest.

The rich man counteth his cares
By the shining gowd in's hand,
By ships that sail on the sea,
By's harvests that whiten the land;
The puir man counteth his blessings
By the ring o' voices sweet,
By the hope that glints in bairnies' een,
By the sound o' bairnies' feet.

An' it's welcome hame, my darlin'!
Hame to mither and me!
An' it's never may ye find look o' love
Than the love ye brought wi' ye!
Cauld are the blasts o' the wild wind,
An' rough the warld may be;
But warm's the hame o' the wee one
In the hearts o' mither and me!

Poverty and Crime.

Most of those who suffer and die go down so quietly as not to disturb the daily [illegible] of more demonstrative matters. Of those who have survived the dark storm that swept part of his own household from his side, and illustrative of the philosophy of that kind of charity to which we have called attention, is the case of William Thorn, one of the greatest of the minor poets of the land of Burns. He was a weaver in Scotland at the time when the power-loom first began effectively to supersede hand labor. He lost his employment from this cause, and in that country of limited opportunities for labor, he was soon [illegible] of shelter for his wife and three children, constituting his suffering family. As they wandered from the scenes of his childhood to beg or starve among strangers, they were overtaken in a storm, and as the angry clouds gathered around them as dark as their own despair, his wife sat down by the dyke side till he would go to a fine house in view to seek a refuge in the barn till the tempest would pass by. He was unfeelingly repulsed from the door. He says in [illegible] that he was reluctant to tell his wife. As he approached her, she said, "Let us hurry in. I'm afraid that Tammy is no well; he has not spoke this while." He told his wife, with a bursting heart, that they would have to sit there all night. He then took from his own person whatever would help to cover his shivering family, and stood in the darkness all night, with such reflections as his own words, published in his autobiography shall tell. He says: "[illegible] it there, shut out from mankind—enclosed—prisoned in misery. No outlook, [illegible] my wife and little ones, who alone cared for me, what would I not have done for their sakes at that hour? Here let me speak out, and be heard, too, while I tell it—that the world does not at all times know how unsafely it sits. When despair has loosed honor's last hold upon the heart, when transcendent wretchedness lays weeping reason in the dust; when every unnatural [illegible] an enemy, who, then, can limit the consequences? For my own part, I confess that, ever since that dreadful night, I can never hear of any extraordinarily criminal without the wish to pierce through the mere judicial view of his career, and which I am persuaded there would often be found to exist an unseen impulse; a chain, with one end fixed in Nature's holiest ground, that drew him on to his destiny."

An Extinct Family.—It is a curious fact that there are [illegible] descendants of Christopher Columbus left on earth. He had two sons, one of whom, Don Diego rose to distinction as an admiral, and the other, Fernando, [illegible] traveler. He not only thrice visited America, but subsequently traversed the whole of Europe, and almost every accessible portion of Asia and Africa. He appears to have been a profound [illegible] and is there by good warrant. In his will he stipulated that his library, containing 20,000 volumes, which he gave to the Cathedral of Seville, should be free to the people, and it is to this day. From books in this library, the latest writers have derived much information on what has been called "The Life of Columbus" was founded. The following quaint epitaph, almost obliterated by time, appears upon the tablet [illegible] the side of his tomb. "What does [illegible] to have [illegible] behind the whole world with my [illegible]; to have three times crossed to the New World discovered by my [illegible] and explored the shores of [illegible] and planted my simple [illegible] in riches, or that I have [illegible] round thee, the divinities from the [illegible] of Olympus, and offer to thee the [illegible] of Ptolemy [illegible] in silence over [illegible] thou [illegible] fail to [illegible] on [illegible] fame's [illegible] [illegible] brave."

The Last Days of Mr. Lincoln.—The following is a description of [illegible] of Mr. Lincoln's remains through the United States. This is the first [illegible] which we have seen, by Mrs. Foulke, [illegible] and the [illegible] locating land, [illegible] of the United States, or have declared their intention to become [illegible]. Mrs. Foulke is a native of Wales.

A Philadelphia paper says that one Innis, a colored barber in Jersey City, has demonstrated the fact that hair may be grafted into a prematurely bald head, and made to grow. He takes hair from the head of another person, and [illegible] a small [illegible] to ascertain whether it is perfect and healthy. This hair he inserts into the cavities of the scalp, and secures it to its place by bandages, which are allowed to remain a few days until the hair takes root.

What an Earthquake Did.—The noted cliffs on the coast of Denmark, called the Queen's Sea near the Island of Noen, in the Baltic, have sunk entirely out of sight from the effects of a recent earthquake. These cliffs stood four hundred feet above the level of the sea, and were a favorite resort in the summer season for tourists from various parts of Europe.

STOW FOUNDATION PAVEMENT.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 18, 1869

Hon. Frank McCoppin, Mayor of San Francisco—Dear Sir: You have now been connected with our City Government as Supervisor and Mayor for the past nine years, during which time you must have given a great deal of attention to Street Paving, and I now ask it as a special favor to me, that you give briefly in writing, the [illegible] of your convictions relative to the several styles of street paving now in use in this city. By so doing you will much oblige

Your obedient servant,
H. F. WILLIAMS,
President Stow Foundation Pavement Co.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20th, 1869

Henry F. Williams, Esq., President of the S. F. P. Co.—Dear Sir: Your communication of yesterday, requesting me to give in writing my opinion relative to the several kinds of street pavement now in use in this city, is before me, and in reply I would say, that at the time I became a municipal officer of this city, in 1860, and for many years thereafter cobble-stone was the only kind of pavement used by the city in its corporate, and by individuals in their individual capacity. About five years ago the Nicolson pavement was introduced here by Mr. J. J. Robbins, assignee of the owner of the patent, and was received with much favor by our citizens. Very many portions of our streets are now paved with the Nicolson Pavement, so-called—still later—that is to say, about two years ago, the "Stow Foundation Pavement" was introduced here by the inventor, and many of our public streets have since been paved with that pavement.

A sufficient length of time has, I think, elapsed, to enable any person who has given the subject any attention, to form an intelligent opinion as to the merits of the respective wooden pavements—of course, I leave the concussion, that, in many respects, such as adaptability to our wants and durability, the Stow is the superior pavement. But, were the two pavements equal in every other respect, the facility with which the Stow can be taken up and relaid, whenever it becomes necessary to do place it for the purpose of laying down gas and water pipes, should, in my judgment, entitle it to preference and public favor.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
FRANK McCOPPIN,
Mayor of the City of San Francisco.

We, the undersigned, have carefully read the above letter from his Honor, Frank McCoppin, to H. F. Williams, Esq., upon the subject of street paving, and we fully indorse every word it contains.

A CONFIDENCE MAN AND IMPOSTER.—A week ago yesterday, a man who goes under the name of H. G Wright, came up from the Sound on board the steamer Hunt, from Victoria to Olympia, representing himself as an Inspector of the Treasury Department. He cut an extensive splurge in this character, testing people's baggage and threatening to arrest some of the passengers for smuggling. Arrived at Olympia, he went around town bragging after unstamped goods and talked largely and loudly about seizing goods, etc., and finally reported a number of persons, as defrauding the revenues, to Mr Stevens, the Collector. The latter wanted to see his authority for acting, when Wright showed him an appointment from Mr Layton, Special Treasury Agent at Victoria, as special revenue detective or inspector, and also an appointment of some sort from Mr Barnard, Acting Collector of Customs. A gentleman of this city, who was then at Olympia, recognising Wright as a person who some time since came to Portland and advertised himself as an insurance agent, and knowing him to be an imposter, gave Mr. Stevens and others information as to his character. Mr Stevens refused to recognize his authority, and the fellow got such cool comfort all round that he went on board the Hunt during Sunday, for a trip back to Victoria, leaving a hotel and livery stable bill unpaid. The captain of the Hunt was also informed as to Wright's real character, and we conclude that upon his arrival at Victoria the fellow got a deserved ventilation. The Columbian makes some mention of his trip up the Sound, and says: "He was first known in Indiana as Frank G Wilson; under which name he married in 1854 a young lady named Owen, by whom he has two children. Deserting his wife he turns up in St. Louis with another name and another woman to whom he was legally married. Arrested for bigamy, he gave the name of Frank W Emerson, obtaining bail he absconded to Worcester, Mass., leaving his bondsmen in pay a forfeit of $3,000. At Worcester he appeared as R F. Fitzgerald, in which name he was sent out to California as agent for the Union Mutual Life Insurance Company. He was highly successful in obtaining insurances, which he forwarded promptly home; but always forgot to remit the premium. Finally an agent was sent out to look after him, who found him living in style with his second wife, in a house of his own, cutting a dash upon the company's money. He failed to make restitution, and was relieved from further service. He subsequently served the Ætna Life Insurance Company for a couple of weeks and was then discharged. About this time his antecedents became known at San Francisco, and he thought he would try and intimidate the parties whom he presumed were the ones posted, so he sent Ku Klux letters to four different parties, so that he could be sure to strike one. The letters contained a full-sized drawing of a pistol and dagger and hieroglyphics. Finding that the parties to whom they were sent took no notice of them, he made arrangements to leave, and accordingly drew a draft in Sacramento on the General Manager of the Ætna Life Insurance Company in San Francisco for several hundred dollars, and after getting it cashed he started overland, with his wife, Arabella, and an infant child, for Portland, Oregon. They remained at Portland, Oregon, for a few days; and then took passage by the Active for this city, arriving here a trip or two ago—if the description furnished does not lead us astray—under the name of H. G. Wright, wife and child. Soon after his arrival he introduced himself to the American Consul and to Mr Layton, United States Special Agent in this city, and from the last named gentleman received an appointment as special revenue detective and was detailed for duty on the steamer Wilson G. Hunt. He left here on Wednesday last on that steamer and it is said his instructions were to search every trunk on board for smuggled goods. If Mr. Wright's his name? be the character we are led to believe, there are few people who would care to have him search their trunks under any pretext. So soon as it became known that the new detective was a fugitive from justice, a message was dispatched to Port Townsend with instructions to arrest and hold Wright until a requisition can be obtained from the States in which his most serious crimes are alleged to have been committed."

We have had the history of this man R. F. Fitzgerald, with his aliases and pranks, on hand for some time, and have only waited for him to "turn up" to give him the benefit of a chapter or two. It is inconceivable how Layton and Barnard should be so heedless as to employ a man in such very delible and important matters. Smarts—oh, they are!

THE QUEEN TELFAIR.—This steamship, which arrived from Victoria yesterday morning to take the place of the Active in the Puget Sound and Victoria trade, has a rather [illegible]. She is an iron propeller, of 413 tons, built on the Clyde, [illegible] during the early part of the late civil war, for the business of running the blockade of Confederate ports. She made several successful trips into and out of Southern ports, carrying [illegible] of war and other goods, but was finally captured at sea after an exciting chase out of a Confederate port, and was taken to New York, condemned as a prize and sold. Capt. John T. [illegible] purchased her, sailed her [illegible] the Horn to San Francisco and sold her to Wright & Frenchman. She is a fine and sharp [illegible] vessel, and sits as though she could go like a scared wolf. Named after her original owner, she is quite a comfortable vessel, having twenty-two staterooms, capable of accommodating forty-four [illegible] in first class style. Capt. Sholl, late of the Active, has been placed in command, and he has with him the Mate and Purser of the Active.

ARRIVAL OF THE "QUEEN TELFAIR."—The steamship Queen Telfair, F. C. Sholl, commander, arrived at this port at 7:50 A M, yesterday, from Victoria. The following are her memoranda and passenger list: Left Victoria, V I, March 9th, at 11:40 A M; passed Cape Flattery at 7:30 P M; crossed Columbia river bar Wednesday, March 10, at 3:10 A M; arrived at Astoria at 6:20 A M, arrived at Portland, March 11th, at 7:30 A M. Passengers—T Phypers, D Washburne, F Weidler, F Henry, D Louis, W C Thompson, Wm Thompson, John Elliot, W Cunningham, Miss F Bryon, Miss I Bryon, J M Torrington, G A Gillingham, A P Mandall, H Smith, H L Aiken, J Higgins, P Burns, Wm Mulcahy, S Lane, C Chilberg, J [illegible], A Lecord, T E Lord, Joseph Beattie, J Pollock, J McDougal, J Byrne, James Morrison, A Harrison, H [illegible], J Huntington, D Maloney, D J Hogan.

A TRIP THE LINE TO VICTORIA.—The Puget Sound people have found out that the O. S. N. Co. are about to put on the road between Monticello and Olympia to [illegible] with their boats on the Columbia and the [illegible] on Puget Sound. The company has not [illegible] of such an intention: but it [illegible] only if the thing should be done [illegible] cast their shadows before"; and it may be [illegible] on the Sound is the shadow of the over-[illegible]. However the matter may be [illegible] by the Olympic and the Puget Sounders, one thing may be counted upon—if the O. S. N. Co. should [illegible] a line the traveling between this city and Victoria will be made more tolerable than it ever has been before.

THE "HELEN ANGIER."—Our announcement of the [illegible] of the bark Helen Angier, Wednesday evening, was [illegible]. She was then on her way up the river in tow by the Okanagan and we had received her manifest; but the vessel did not arrive till yesterday afternoon. She is a large, fine looking bark of great freight capacity, though evidently not built for speed. She is [illegible] moored at McCraken, Merrill & Co.'s wharf, where she will discharge a part of her cargo. In a few days she will begin loading with breadstuffs for Liverpool direct. Col. McCraken informs us that the greater part of her cargo is already engaged.

CIRCUIT COURT.—JUDGE UPTON, JUDGE.—The following are the proceedings of the Circuit Court yesterday:

Mose Moses vs A. Meier; verdict of $1,050 for plaintiff.

Thomas O'Hara vs Fred. Becket; jury empannelled and case submitted.

State of Oregon vs James Connoly; verdict of jury rendered; "guilty of murder in the second degree."

THE SURVEY.—We learn that Mr. C. W. Burrage and party of thirteen, are engaged in surveying a line for the C— — Central, East Side, through the Umpqua Valley. The route over the Calapooia mountains and [illegible] the Umpqua Valley is reported much easier than was ever anticipated. No obstacle greater than an [illegible] of a few feet and now and then a grade of [illegible] eighty feet per mile has yet been found.

BERRY AND FRUITS.—The warm weather which has prevailed for the last month has started fruit buds of all sorts, and forwarded them so much as to render them exceedingly liable to be killed by the frosts which are almost sure yet to come. Unless the spring months shall prove as [illegible] like as those of winter, we shall yet have many hard frosts, and probably very little or no fruit.

THE WHITE HOUSE.—We learn that this famous place of resort changed hands on Wednesday—Messrs Teal & [illegible] selling to Mr H C. Leonard. It is probable that the management will be reconstructed in some respects, and that it will be more popular than ever, as a place of resort.

THE SENTENCE.—James Connolly, convicted of murder in the second degree, in the killing of "Buckskin Bill," will be sentenced on Saturday. The statute defines the [illegible] for this crime—imprisonment in the penitentiary for life.

THE SAN FRANCISCO.—Capt Sholl informs us that the Active was to sail on Wednesday for San Francisco. Capt. Bolles, who brought the Telfair to Victoria, returned in command of her.

M. E. SOCIABLE.—The ladies of the M E Church will have a sociable at the basement of the church at half past 7 o'clock this evening. All are invited.

THANKS.—The Purser of the Queen Telfair has our thanks for late files of Victoria papers.

THE TUALATIN.—The stage of water in the Tualatin river is so low that navigation is becoming next to impossible.

NIGHT SCHOOL.—Mr Fitzgerald has opened a Night School in the schoolhouse (up stairs) near the Catholic Church. For Terms—See the Teacher

RAFFLE OF A VELOCIPEDE.—The three wheel velocipede, built at the Willamette Iron Works, will be raffled for at the Pacific saloon, North Front street, as soon as the chances shall be taken—60 chances at $1 each.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE says the reason why PLANTATION BITTERS are so generally used is owing to the fact that they are always made up to the original standard and of pure material, let the price be what it will. The Tribune just hits the nail on the head, for Plantation Bitters are not only made of pure material, but the people are told what they are made of, as the receipt is wrapped around each bottle. Don't go home without a bottle.

Attention, Washington Guard!—A [illegible] of your Company will be held this evening at 7½ o'clock. A punctual attendance is requested.

By order of the Captain
S. V FULLER, O S.

Odds and Ends

An exchange says that Brigham Young's son Joe smokes good cigars, drinks good liquor, get drunk, plays poker, licks his wives, and preaches the Gospel.

Toads are sold in Paris at the rate of fifteen cents and are [illegible] animals used for the protection of vineyards and gardens from the ravages of insects that devour the pursuit of birds.

It is said that a telegraph line, used by the British Admiralty, between Europe and America is made one of its [illegible] shall be obliged to believe the story until he has seen such a map.

Silver and gold anklets for the ladies are about to become fashionable. They will be worn outside the stockings, and the dress will be short, that they may be seen by the naughty, naughty men.

A lady in Philadelphia [illegible] a "notice" in the newspapers for a grand ball at the Academy of Music. "Females of an equivocal character will be rigidly excluded." Why not apply the same rule to the sexes, and exclude all equivocal characters. The queen's evidence!

In the argument before the Supreme Court, says the Boston Advertiser, upon the meaning of the word "carriage," in the will of the late Joseph E. Worcester, LL. D., the distinguished lexicographer, one of the counsel cited the definition of the word given in Webster's Dictionary, as indicating the intention of the testator.

The papers are having two Bayards elected to the Senate from Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey in fact, every State in that vicinity. Those two Bayards seem to cause as much confusion as the two Dromios, the two Ephesian twins, or the two Crugans who bothered Pat in his counting. "Mestif was one, the two Crugans was two," etc.

A tricky individual was refused a drink on credit he paid for it in advance. A bystander, who owed the barker one in the way of practical jokes, told him give the man his liquor, "and," said he, "if he refuses to pay for it, I will." The fellow got his drink, but refused to pay for it, and so did his endorser, as he had promised that he would.

A Berlin paper announces that a Russian officer of St. Petersburg has invented a new fire-arm more murderous than any hitherto known. It can be fired off two hundred times per minute, and will fill a space of thirty paces square with a shower of grape and shot. It can be directed against objects near or distant, and will produce its effects at a distance of 2,400 paces. Its management is extremely easy.

At a school in the north of England, during a lesson in the animal kingdom, the teacher put the following question:

"Can any boy name to me an animal of the order of edentata- that is a front toothless animal."

A boy, whose face beamed with pleasure at the prospect of a good mark, replied

"I can."

"Well, what is the animal?"

"My grandmother," replied the boy, with great glee.

PUGET SOUND

From the Olympia Transcript, March 6

The large steam saw mill at Port Madison has been stopped for the last three weeks for repairs. The furnaces have been rebuilt, and the boilers relaid, and extensive repairs and improvements made upon the mill. It will commence running on Monday next. This mill cuts over 2,000,000 feet of lumber per month. Arrangements are being made in the ship yard for a large amount of work during the coming summer.

We learn from Mr Vincent Cordell, third mate of the bark Marmora, which loaded with lumber at Port Blakeley nearly a year ago, that she was driven ashore by the earthquake and tidal wave which visited the coast of South America. Our informant did not know the amount of damage done to her, or whether she was got off, but it is probable she was carried inland by the tidal wave, like the U. S. steamer Watsree, and proved a total loss. The Marmora is the vessel on which Smith killed Butler in April last, and for which he was sentenced to be hung last week.

We understand that a subscription has been taken up among the people of Puyallup valley, for the purpose of clearing out and improving the river, with fair prospects of success. We presume the object is to remove the drifts and snags, so as to permit the floating of logs and timber. Along its banks there is a large quantity of timbered lands, from which millions of feet of logs for lumber can be cut, convenient to the river, and which, on the opening of this stream, can easily be run down to the new mills now being built at Tacoma, where they will find a ready market. The timber in the Puyallup valley is not under the control of one monopolising company and will be of some substantial benefit to the people.

The following amount of business has been transacted at the Land Office in this place, by the Register and Receiver, during the month of February. Lands sold for cash, 9,728 87-000 acres, lands entered by settlers under the homestead act, 1,693 98-100 acres; certificates of final proof under the homestead act, by five years residence and cultivation, 1,812 49-100 acres; lands entered under the pre-emption act, 1,918 82-100 acres; lands located by Agricultural College scrip, 160 acres, land titles perfected under the donation act, 658 16-100 acres, making a total of 15,965 34-100 acres. This may be considered a large month's work, as none of the above lands have been sold or taken up in very large tracts, and is well scattered among the classes.

SHARP.—A man from the country was accosted by a Chicago juvenile with the usual question.

"Black your boots, sir?"

"No."

"Black 'em for five cents, sir."

"No."

"I'll do 'em for nothing!"

"All right."

The young hopeful set about his work with great relish, and soon had one boot in a bright, shining condition. Then, turning up his face to blacker, he gravely announced "Now, you'll have to give me a quarter to do the other."

"I am transported to see you," as the convict said to the kangaroo.

The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the interior a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of its consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. The Daily Oregonian.

FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 12, 1869.

The Cabinet Completed.

The President's final work in completing his Cabinet will give general satisfaction to the country. The members now are:

HAMILTON FISH, of New York, Secretary of State.
GEO S BOUTWELL, of Massachusetts, Secretary of the Treasury.
A H. BOVIE, of Pennsylvania, Secretary of the Navy.
JOHN A. RAWLINGS, of Illinois, Secretary of War
JACOB D. COX, of Ohio, Secretary of the Interior.
JOHN A. CRESSWELL, of Maryland, Postmaster General.
E. B. HOARE, of Massachusetts, Attorney General

The new Secretary of State is a man widely known and highly esteemed for his abilities and character. He was elected Lieutenant Governor of New York in 1846 and again in 1847, and was elected Governor in 1848, which office he held until 1850. He was one of the earliest Republicans, and has steadily given his large influence to the support of that party. His talents are not of the most brilliant order, but are substantial and solid, corresponding with the quality of his personal character. The President could scarcely have selected any one for the position who would command more general respect. Mr. Boutwell, the Secretary of the Treasury, has been Governor of Massachusetts, and a Congressman from that State; and before the appointment of Rollins, was Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in which office he greatly distinguished himself. His appointment as Secretary of the Treasury is one "eminently fit to be made." General Rawlings, the Secretary of War, has been chief of Grant's staff for several years, and has greatly distinguished himself in that position. The other members of the Cabinet remain as first announced. The Cabinet is now a very good one and will inspire general confidence throughout the country.

How Government Bonds are Taxed

Our national banks are exempt from direct local taxation, but it is a great mistake to suppose that no species of taxation can reach them. A brief statement of facts will show how the case stands. The bonds of the United States are held in about the following proportions:

By National Banks	$425,000,000
Insurance Companies	150,000,000
Savings Banks	225,000,000
Trust companies, private bankers, public corporations	200,000,000
Held in Europe	600,000,000
Total	$1,600,000,000

Leaving about $700,000,000 in the hands of private persons in this country. Of course the bonds held in foreign countries are beyond the reach of every species of domestic taxation. But the $1,000,000,000 of bonds held by corporations in this country all pay taxes indirectly. National Bank shares, which rest on national bonds, are taxable, and according to the official returns of 1867 the sum of $18,338,431 was collected from them by taxation. The shareholders of the National Banks of Ohio, Illinois and Indiana, though their capital is invested in national bonds, were assessed for taxes in 1867 for State and local purposes to the following amounts: Ohio, $590,951; Indiana, $900,372; Illinois, $221,917. Total, $1,713,240. And for less than $48,000,000 bonds. This species of indirect taxation has several times been held to be constitutional by the Supreme Court; for though the shares of the Banks could not be taxed directly, the Bank shares are liable to local taxation. By a similar rule, the shares of all fire, marine and life insurance companies in the country, though based on Government bonds, may be taxed by the local authorities. The same is true of the savings banks, trust companies, etc. In this way these one thousand millions of national bonds pay taxes almost or quite to the full proportion of other species of property. The Supreme Court has drawn a clear distinction between this method of taxation and the direct imposition of taxes on the bonds themselves, which is prohibited by the Constitution.

The Central Railway.

The completion of the Union Pacific Railroad by the end of the last month has been both a surprise and a serious inconvenience to the Pacific slope. Our mails and express matter are carried regularly and in a short time accommodated to the new and improved order of things, when communication suddenly closed and the mails came started by sea again; and now there is no telling when we shall begin to get them by the overland route in as good time as before. If the Central route is to be closed a portion of every year in this manner, it will become absolutely necessary to build a railroad by a route which will not be subject to such obstruction; in short, the Northern road must be built for the accommodation of the Northern Pacific slope, and the Southern road must be constructed for California and the lower coast. Some of the journals of California are awake to this state of facts. The Sacramento Bee virtually concedes the impracticability of the Central route for a railway that can be relied on to transport the vast country that will be drawn after the continent. It says that the snow-belt on the Central route is nearly 500 miles long, and that all the region over 6,000 feet above sea level is liable to snow impediments. The same paper concedes that it will be utterly impossible to keep the road open at all times, and that we may expect it to be closed during a part of every winter. The necessity of railway communication across the continent by other routes is becoming apparent. The problem will demonstrate itself. Communication by the Central route is open again, but a stoppage for a month seems to have put a new idea into the minds of our California friends.

Compressed Air as a Motive Power.—The practicability of driving mining machinery by compressed air is, as we learn from the San Francisco Herald, attracting some attention in mining circles. It is an experiment worthy of the most careful and thorough tests, for upon its success will depend much of the future prosperity of our vast mining interests. Many of our silver mines are situated in regions remote from water, which has to be supplied often at great cost. With the propulsion of machinery by compressed air, the necessity for conducting water to mines at a high altitude and great expense will be practically overcome. The compressor for this new motor can be erected in those localities where wood and water abound, and by means of strong iron pipes conveyed to any distance with no loss of expansive power by transmission. The drilling machine used in the Mont Cenis tunnel, under the Alps, is propelled by compressed air, and thorough ventilation at the same time secured. The saving to mining companies located, as are those on Treasure Hill, at a distance above all water, and with a scanty supply of wood, will be sufficient for the payment of a handsome annual interest on the capital of the company. The difference in working a mine that is daily extracting from fifty to one hundred tons of ore, in the item of wood alone, even in a locality where wood abounds, will be considerable. Where wood can be supplied for from $6 to $8 per cord, the advantage over that of one located at a distance and altitude that necessitates a long and up-hill cartage, will be from $25 to $30 per day, which amounts to from $8,000 to $10,000 per annum; or sufficient to pay ten per cent interest on a capital of $80,000 to $100,000.

Small Notes.

On the 1st of March the Nevada Legislature ratified by a large majority the proposed Fifteenth, or Suffrage Amendment to the Constitution. Other States are ratifying it rapidly, and there is little doubt but the requisite three-fourths will be secured before the close of the present year.

The Illinois Legislature has passed a bill to incorporate the "Inter-Oceanic Hotel Company of Chicago," with a capital of two million dollars. The site of the hotel, says the Chicago Post, will doubtless be somewhere on Michigan Avenue, and in its generous proportions and perfect appointments will excel any hotel building in the country.

The late message of the acting Governor of Utah develops the fact that not a single free school exists throughout the whole dominions of Brigham Young. An act providing for the establishment and support of a system of education was approved January 19, 1866, but unfortunately the first section of the law left it to the option of the inhabitants of the district, whether they should or not give effect to the plan, and the result has been universal rejection.

The Sacramento Union, in an article on the central railroad route across the continent, after alluding to the snow blockade, frankly admits "that a better route might have been taken for the first Atlantic and Pacific railroad than this one, which runs through a comparative desert for over 1,200 miles. There are far better lands, more natural resources, and less snow on either the Northern or Southern Pacific routes. But this Central line was settled upon first, because it is the shortest and most direct route from the centre of population in the East to San Francisco Bay."

The Commercial sagely says: "Early after the disruption of the Legislative Assembly Secretary May was informed of the law—which was plain enough—forbidding the issue by the Secretary of State, or endorsement by the Treasurer, of warrants, except where appropriations had been made." And pray by whom was the Secretary "informed of the law?" We will answer the question for the Commercial. It was Col. Chapman who gave the information, or instructions, to which that paper alludes. In its opinion the Secretary was bound to take the twaddle of one of Chapman's newspaper articles as an authoritative exposition of the law, and obey it! Wouldn't the State cut a figure trying to run on Chapman's newspaper opinions?

The pastor of the Methodist Church at San Jose (Cal.) has been giving some attention to the instruction of a few Chinese in the English language and in the principles of Christianity. Recently he received some threatening letters, something like those written no great while ago by the Ku Klux of Oregon City, to the effect that if he did not desist from a work so odious and criminal in the eyes of the constitutional Democracy, his church would be burned. It was also threatened that all who employed Chinese should be punished in like manner. Sure enough, in a short time the church was burned; and following it came the burning of a large distillery at the same place, involving a loss of $100,000, because three or four Chinese were employed in it. Every Democratic paper on the Pacific coast is encouraging such work as this. A portion of this "white man's party" are below the barbarians against whom they rail so continually.

John C. Breckinridge, the most guilty man of all those who were connected with the rebellion, has got back to Kentucky. Other rebels have taken shelter under the excuse of having "obeyed their State;" but he cannot plead even this poor excuse. He left his seat in the Senate of the United States whose Constitution he was under a sworn obligation to support, and in direct violation of his oath and duty both to the General Government and his own State,—for his State never seceded,—he went into the rebellion and fought both against the Union and his own State of Kentucky. The usual Democratic formula by which the rebellion is excused is this: "The seceding States cannot be punished, for the acts of treason, if any were committed, were the work of individuals; individuals cannot be punished, because they merely obeyed their State." But the most ingenious of Breckinridge's friends cannot find in this convenient, though nonsensical abracadabra, any excuse for him. His crime will stand forever without a shadow of palliation.

In reply to the Democratic editors who spend so much of their time in harping on old John Brown, the Owyhee Tidal Wave says: "The old man expiated his heinous offense of treason by being hung by the neck until he was dead on the 2d day of December, 1859. The law has been satisfied so far as he was concerned, more than nine years; during which time thousands of leading Democrats have committed treason in comparison with which Brown's offense, with his nineteen followers, was as nothing, and in their case neither law nor justice has claimed any penance or punishment. Then why continue to prosecute the case against that feeble old fanatic, whose brain had been crazed by the murder of his sons, in the interest of slavery by border ruffians, and who in his bereavement, and stung by the recollection of a great wrong, raised his palsied hand above his aged head and swore to fight against the monster institution that had bereft him of his offspring during the remainder of his wretched life, while with the general consent of all parties the guiltier parties go free. We are not clamoring for the just punishment of the arch traitors, the leaders of the rebellion and authors of so much bloodshed, poverty and taxation, but simply putting in a human plea for the remains of one who has paid the penalty of his great crime. Let his old bones rest in peace." This is very aptly put.

A Confederate Captain and A. Q. M. was one day talking to a mixed crowd of officers and privates. To illustrate the depreciation of currency he took out his Frodsham watch, and said: "That cost me twenty-five hundred dollars!" A soldier said: "Mister, you 'uns didn't pay twenty-five hundred dollars for that ere watch, did you?" "I did that," was the reply. Soldier continued "Would you 'uns let us use it?" It was handed over. After a close examination the soldier again asked: "Mister, you is jokin', ain't you?" "Not a bit of it," said the A. Q. M. With an expression of despair, the soldier handed it back, saying: "Well, Mister, you 'uns must be a darned fool—or a Quartermaster!"

Beware! said the potter to the clay, and it became ware.

The extensive use of these watches for the last fifteen years by Railway Conductors, Engineers and Expressmen, the most exacting of watch wearers, has thoroughly demonstrated the strength, steadiness, durability and accuracy of the Waltham Watch. To satisfy that class in all these respects, is to decide the question as to the real value of these timekeepers.

The superior organization and great extent of the Company's Works at Waltham, enable them to produce watches, COMBINING THE BEST AND LATEST IMPROVEMENTS, and at a price which renders competition futile, and those who buy any other watch, merely pay from 25 to 50 per cent. more for their watches than is necessary.

HOAGLAND'S

NEW PATENT SHAFT COUPLING!

W. E. COOPER

HAS PURCHASED THE RIGHT FOR THIS County of the above Patent, and will hereafter use it in the construction of all the Vehicles manufactured at his extensive

Carriage Factory,

Corner of Second and Morrison Streets.

He respectfully refers to the following

CARD.

Having examined the New Patent Shaft Coupling, invented by H. R Hoagland, we feel pleasure in informing the public that in our opinion it is the safest and best method of connecting shafts or tongues to all vehicles that has ever been used.

It fastens without bolt or screw, and is therefore, easily and speedily separated. It rests on Gutta Percha so as to be entirely free from the rattling sound which so often disturbs restless horses. It is easily changed so that the shafts or tongue may be detached in an instant, and is convenient, safe and secure.

It is easy to change to this style of coupling any buggy or other vehicle now in use, and with small expense. We have come to the conclusion to use this new invention ourselves and recommend its use in all cases. We consider it far superior to the Brewster Patent, heretofore considered the best in use.
